Two prominent figures in education will participate in the inauguration of Asa S. Knowles as president of the University of Toledo on May 9, it was announced today.

They are the Rev. Robert I. Gannon, S.J., former president of Fordham University and Dr. Benjamin Pine, education editor of the New York Times.

Father Gannon will give the address at a faculty dinner for President and Mrs. Knowles in the Toledo Club following the inauguration ceremony in the Peristyle of the Toledo Museum of Art.

Dr. Pine will speak at an open meeting at 1:15 p.m. in the university's Doermann Theater following a luncheon on the campus for delegates.

The inaugural address will be given by Dr. Everett H. Case, president of Colgate University.
