UT Adopts Budgets, Increases Fees, Names Capital Campaign Director

The University of Toledo's Board of Trustees today (July 14) adopted a general fund budget of $156 million for the fiscal year that began July 1, an increase of $5.5 million (3.7 percent) from the general fund budget for the year just ended. It also adopted budgets for various auxiliary funds that total an additional $17.3 million.

The general fund budget includes combined undergraduate student instructional and general fee increases, effective this fall, that accommodate the state-mandated limit of five percent, action similar to that taken recently by the boards of Ohio State University, Bowling Green and other state universities.

Graduate instructional fees, the tuition surcharge paid by out-of-state students, and a portion of the student general fee are not covered by the state-mandated limit. However, except for instructional fees for the College of Law – which were increased by eight percent in an earlier board action last April – increases in these other categories will approximate the mandated limit.

For the coming academic year, a full-time undergraduate student will pay $854.88 in instructional fees per quarter, up by $42.48 from last fall; a full-time graduate student will pay $1,297.20 per quarter, up by $62.20; and a full-time law student will pay $2,338.20 per semester, up by $173.20.

The tuition surcharge paid by non-Ohio residents will increase to $1,507.20 per quarter, up by $72.20. The student general fee, which covers various student activities, services and some bonded indebtedness – proceeds of which have been used to construct student facilities such as the Student Union addition and the Student Recreation Center – will increase by $12.04 per quarter to $224.04.

In related action, the board authorized small quarterly increases in the fees charged non-students for use of the Student Recreation Center: $1.58 for faculty and staff, and $2 for UT alumni and dependants.

The board raised room rates in campus residence halls by an average of 7.7 percent at its May meeting. Residence hall fees are part of an auxiliary fund budget, not part of the general fund.

State appropriations provide 42 percent of the University's general fund budget, and student fees provide 52.5 percent. The state has guaranteed a three percent increase in instructional subsidies for state universities during the year just beginning. The Ohio Office of Budget and Management and the Legislative Budget Office project an increase in state revenues, UT President Frank E. Horton told trustees. However, he noted that the governor reserves the right to impose a reduction in subsidies should state revenue projections not be attained

"Increases in social, health-related and prison costs within the state budget continue to restrict funds available to higher education in Ohio," he told trustees "And I don't see any major influx of resources in the next few years. We need to manage our resource base through careful allocation and review processes." But he noted that the budget adopted today does provide greater resources for the law library, student aid, the first-time funding of scholarships for 35 minority students who have successfully completed the University's EXCEL program for high school students, and for UT's Center for Teaching Excellence.

The board approved a management contract between UT and Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc for operation of bookstores on the Bancroft, Scott Park and Toledo Museum of Art campuses for a period of five years, from Sept. 1, 1993, through Aug. 31, 1998. A supplemental agreement covers operations of the Barnes & Noble bookstore at UT's Southwest Academic Center at Secor Road and Door Street.

The board approved the appointment of Eugene Haberman as UT's executive director of development and director of the University's $40 million capital campaign. Haberman will report directly to President Horton. He began his association with the University in May 1991 as assistant vice president for development, but left UT's administration in September 1991 to become president of The University of Toledo Foundation. In his new post with the University, Haberman will receive a salary of $90,854 annually, underwritten by the UT Foundation.

It approved a one-time payment of $5,056,62 that will provide UT with an absolute release of liability in connection with the EPA-ordered cleanup of the Commercial Oil Services chemical dump on Oregon, Ohio. During the company's years of operation at the site (1969-1985), UT disposed of some 3,000 gallons of used motor oil there and had been listed as one of 849 local "potentially responsible parties" ordered to assist in paying cleanup costs.

It approved the award of contracts valued at $124,151 to provide additional exterior lighting on the Bancroft and Scott Park campuses. Toledo Edison made a $100,000 contribution toward the project through the Capital Equipment Partnership Fund established with UT in 1989.

And it accepted research grants from various outside sources valued at $976,582. Horton noted that research grants received through the end of the fiscal year on June 30 exceeded $15 million in value for the first time in the University's history.

Retired Administrator Establishes Fund to Improve Teaching

Dr. Richard R. Perry (South Fredericksburg Drive, Sylvania), who has been associated with The University of Toledo for more than 40 years, has established a fund to enhance the education of teachers.

The associate vice president emeritus for academic affairs and professor emeritus of higher education has provided more than $75,000 from his retirement service credits to the Richard R. Perry Fund for Program Excellence. Part of the UT Board of Trustees approved Retired Faculty Fund for Program Excellence, the Perry fund will bring together the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Education and Allied Professions.

"My interest here is quite simple: to provide a scholarly forum in which the disciplines of arts and sciences and those of education can join in efforts to mutually improve the scholarly preparation of teachers," Perry said.

Seminars stressing excellence in teaching will feature nationally recognized scholars. "These are expected to be helpful in improving and increasing the discipline knowledge base and academic standards of those who prepare for teaching," Perry said.

UT President Frank E. Horton said, "I would like to thank Richard for his generous support to The University of Toledo. His thoughts on the use of this fund are certainly keeping with the goals and objectives of UT."

Dr. Philip J. Rusche, dean of the College of Education and Allied Professions, said, "We appreciate the vision given by Dr. Perry in bringing together the disciplines of humanities, literature, science, social sciences and the arts as they relate to education and teacher preparation."

Rusche and Dr. Scott G. McNall, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, have selected two faculty members for a committee that will decide on speakers and seminars. They are Dr. James R. Gress, chairman and professor of elementary and early childhood education; Dr. Peter A. Dewitz, professor of elementary education; Dr. William D. Hoover, chairman and professor of history; and Dr. Roger D. Ray, director of the Humanities Institute and professor of history.

McNall said, "We're very pleased that Dr. Perry has given this support for education. We know the lectures will provide valuable information to students and faculty in both colleges."

Dr. Harold L. Allen, vice president for graduate studies, research and economic development, said, "The establishment of the Richard R. Perry Fund for Program Excellence and the lectureship which it will support will have long-reaching benefits for current as well as future students of the University."

Perry, who retired from UT in June 1990, played a vital role at the University for more than four decades. One of UT's most enduring figures, he was the first:

- special assistant to a UT president;
- director of admissions;
- director of placement;
- director of alumni relations;
- person to earn bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from UT;
- person to earn a doctorate in higher education;
- person in Ohio to organize a college or university office of institutional research.

He also is director of the University's strategic academic plan, "UT 2000," and he still teaches at least one quarter a year.

Cargol Named Dean of UT's Community and Technical College

Dr. Owen F. Cargol, vice president for academic affairs at Highline Community College, Des Moines, Wash., was appointed dean of The University of Toledo's Community and Technical College by UT's Board of Trustees at its meeting today (July 14).

Cargol succeeds Dr. Charles H. Bohlen, who resigned as dean of the Community and Technical College last June to become president of Laramie County Community College in Cheyenne, Wyo. Cargol's appointment is effective on Aug. 1 at an annual salary of $93,000.

He holds a doctoral degree in higher education administration from Pennsylvania State University and has done postdoctoral work in higher education leadership, policy and curriculum development at Harvard University. During 1992, he was a Fulbright Fellow in the Federal Republic of Germany, studying its higher and technical education systems. He also holds a master of education degree from Oregon State University, a bachelor of science degree in horticulture from Oregon State, and a bachelor of science degree in business administration from Louisiana State University.

"Dr. Cargol's academic qualifications, his experience as a senior administrator and strategic planner at Highline Community College and elsewhere, and his management style and leadership as president of the Washington Instruction Commission and a participant in the work of the Washington Higher Education Planning Commission, will have important applications in assisting our Community and Technical College in its continuing development as an educational and community asset," said UT President Frank E. Horton.

"I'm delighted with my appointment as dean of the Community and Technical College," Cargol said following today's meeting. "I know that I'll very much appreciate being part of an academic association such as The University of Toledo."

Cargol has served as vice president for academic affairs at Highline Community College since 1987. Previously, he had been dean of undergraduate studies and associate professor of management at Louisiana State University, dean of instruction and instructor in management at North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene, research assistant to the president of Pennsylvania State University, and a public relations representative with Texaco Inc. in New Orleans.

UT's University College Changes Structure

The programs of The University of Toledo's University College will be continued within a newly organized University College Programs umbrella structure beginning Sept 20

Several plans for restructuring the administrative, advising and academic programs of the college were reviewed by a task force over the past year. The adopted plan has been endorsed by the Faculty Senate executive committee.

Since its establishment in 1971, University College has offered flexible baccalaureate degree programs to an enrollment of nontraditional students, many of them employed adults taking evening courses, and has provided special opportunities for those holding two-year associate degrees to complete studies toward the bachelor's degree.

Under the reorganization, students will continue to have flexible academic program choices available, according to Dr. Harold L. Allen, UT's acting vice president for academic affairs.

Effective this fall, University College Programs will be administered by a director rather than a dean, who will be responsible to the vice president for academic affairs. An executive council, consisting of the deans of the Community and Technical College and the colleges of Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, and Education and Allied Professions, will serve as an advisory group to the director.

A faculty committee composed of representatives from the same four colleges will oversee the curriculum; maintain standards for admission, performance and graduation; approve new individualized student programs to better serve adult students; and design a new and expanded general studies program, Allen explained. UT's Faculty Senate will recommend faculty for appointment to this committee.

"We feel that the University College Programs structure will permit the University not only to continue to offer but to substantially enhance and provide even greater opportunities for high quality, flexible academic programs to meet the needs of a very important segment of the University's student body, our adult, nontraditional students," Allen said.

Further information on University College Programs can be obtained by calling 537-2051.

UT to Begin Installment Payment Plan for Student Fees in November

Some University of Toledo students should feel a little less stress as they register for winter quarter classes come November.

UT will offer students a monthly, no-interest installment payment plan for virtually all fees beginning with the winter quarter of the coming academic year, according to Scott C. Kelley, associate vice president for financial affairs.

The installation of about $300,000 in computer software and equipment will implement a new billing receivables/student records system and make the installment payment plan possible.

For some years, the University has accepted Visa and MasterCard credit card charges in payment of such fees and will continue to do so. But this is the first time it has permitted students to pay fees directly to UT on a monthly basis.

The plan was approved by the University's Board of Trustees at its July 14 meeting.

Students participating in winter quarter advanced registration, which begins Oct. 27 and extends through Nov. 17, will be given an option to participate in the plan for a service fee of $20 per quarter. Students participating in continuous registration, from Dec. 7 through Dec. 10 and on Jan. 3, will not be eligible for the plan.

Fees may include undergraduate and graduate instructional fees, the tuition surcharge paid by non-Ohio residents, room and board, student general fees, parking, matriculation and laboratory fees in any combination.

Students registering for the winter quarter will pay 40 percent of the total in November, 30 percent in December and 30 percent in January, Kelley explained. Similarly, students registering for the spring quarter will pay 40 percent in February, 30 percent in March and 30 percent in April, and students enrolling in the fall quarter will pay 40 percent in August, 30 percent in September and 30 percent in October. The plan will not be available for those registering for summer quarter classes.

Students will receive information on the plan with their registration materials. Those who participate will be asked to sign a promissory note for the fees they wish to include in the plan. No credit check will be required. A late payment fee of $25 will be levied when payments are more

"We've been aware for some time that students wanted such a payment plan," Kelley said, "particularly as student fees have increased under state budget pressures. We surveyed state universities in Ohio and found that a number of them – including Ohio State, Ohio University, Kent State, Cleveland State, Wright State, Miami and Bowling Green – have or are about to begin installment payment plans. We understand it can be difficult to come up with full payment at the beginning of each quarter. Now we have the computer technology to make the plan possible. We feel many of our students will take advantage of this opportunity."

Center for Women Awards Science/Math Scholarships

The University of Toledo's Catharine S. Eberly Center for Women has awarded six scholarships to women pursuing associate, bachelor and postgraduate degrees in math or science.

Two graduate students received $1,000 scholarships. They are:

- Cassandra Mattison (Cheltenham Road, Toledo), who is working toward a master's degree in industrial engineering. Her undergraduate degree is from the Georgia Institute of Technology, where she was in the school of industrial and system engineering. Upon completion of her degree, she plans to pursue a doctoral degree. In her spare time, she works with inner city children in the Toledo Public Schools.

- Marghretta Smith (Weldwood Lane, Sylvania), who is pursuing a master's degree in educational technology with an emphasis on computing. She balances school with a full-time job and raising a child.

Four undergraduate students received $500 apiece. They are:

- Tracey VonWesternhagan (Forestview, Temperance, Mich.), a finance major in the College of Business Administration. She is a single parent who has had to secure loans to supplement grants. After she completes her undergraduate studies, she plans to work in her field and pursue her master's degree.

- Angela Boudouris-Powers (Clegg, Lambertville, Mich.), a nursing student in the College of Arts and Sciences. She chose nursing as a result of her experiences with the nurses who cared for her husband when he had cancer surgery last year.

- Lisa Niese (Road 15, Continental, Ohio), a biology major in the College of Arts and Sciences. She is one of 10 children and plans to return to her rural community as a general practitioner. She hopes to attend the Medical College of Ohio after her graduation.

- Sheryl Herner (Scranton Road, Norwalk, Ohio) is a third-year student in the College of Pharmacy. She is a member of Golden Key National Honor Society and Alpha Lambda Delta Honor Society, and she is a 4-H club adviser in her spare time.

The scholarships were a result of a study by the American Association of Women

Educational Foundation, which stated that although differences in math achievement between boys and girls are declining, a gender gap in science is increasing. The report also revealed that girls who are highly competent in math and science are much less likely to pursue scientific or technological careers than their male counterparts.

"We wanted to do something within our own institution to start changing these numbers and address the national problem," Dianne Mills, director of the Center for Women, said.

The Center held its first golf tournament last year, which raised approximately $17,000 for the Eberly Center Scholarship for Women in Math and Science.

The Second Annual Eberly Scholarship Open will be Saturday, Sept. 18, at Ottawa Park Golf Course. All proceeds from the event will go toward the scholarship fund. Mills hopes the community will participate again this year. "The community participation made this a success last year."

ComTech Receives Contract with Lucas County Emergency Medical Services

The emergency medical technology program (EMT) at The University of Toledo's Community and Technical College has received a contract from Lucas County Emergency Medical Services (LCEMS).

The EMT program will provide monthly continuing education programs through the end of the year for paramedics employed in the Lucas County area.

According to Judith Ruple, assistant professor and director of the EMT program, the proposal calls for an EMS education consortium joining the University with local hospitals and medical centers. The consortium will offer all interested health care providers the opportunity to become involved in EMS education.

Ruple said, "This will reduce costly duplication of programs in the community as well as provide for consistency in continuing education programs."

The University of Toledo is accredited by the state of Ohio and offers certificate-level EMT advanced and paramedic education as well as an undergraduate degree in emergency medical technology.
