FIRST TEST: A MINITEST—The first 32-member class of the new Medical College of Ohio started down the long road toward medical degrees today with a minitest. Arriving for orientation and registration before classes start Monday, the students took the National Board of Medical Examiners test that determines their general knowledge of medicine. The minitest will be given every six months to determine how much student medical knowledge increases, reflecting curriculum areas which may need strengthening. Dr. Harold Haley, associate dean for student affairs, gives the test rules to two members of the class, Mrs. Eva Zornow, foreground, and Mrs. Donna Woodson. Both women are from Toledo.
