

CHARLES FEILBACH

HERE is no death. Our fellow Rotarian, Chas. Feilbach, has been summoned to the higher life for which he had so well and so beautifully prepared himself.

The faces of little children here will be tinged with sadness; over there they must be shining with gladness.

Men like Chas. Feilbach are never replaced. The world is forever poorer for their passing. For him the truest eulogy is the thoughtful contemplation of his character and virtues and the solemn resolve to raise the standard of our own contributions to life, through the influence of his example.

Therefore, be it resolved that Chas. Feilbach has immeasurably enriched the city in which he lived and toiled; that he represented the highest type of Rotary principles; that not so much in words as in deeds he put service before self; that he was a splendid type of business man and citizen; that we of the Rotary Club of Toledo, while acting as a body, are individually sobered and stilled by his going; that each of us long will be upheld and inspired, by the memory of his true Rotarianism, in "carrying on."
