

JOHN MOORHEAD, Findlay (center), and Ralph Whalen, Neapolis (right), observe Dr. Thomas Moriarty's procedure for examining a patient, James Schwab, Route 5, Napoleon, who injured his hand in a recent cornpicker mishap. In addition to viewing the patient's progress, they also inspected his X-rays. Both students were excited by the visitation. "It works enthusiasm to a peak; a student can experience the end result of the years of study that are still ahead of him" were their comments.

MICHAEL FADELL, 22 (left), and Joe Schneider, 22, both of Toledo and students at Toledo's Medical College of Ohio look over case histories with Dr. Wilson J. Stough. The young men are both June, 1969, graduates of the University of Toledo. Their main interest in the visitation program was to get "different ideas of small town doctors' practice" and to make "comparisons of future interests vs. practice in a larger town."
